

AB 767, Seeks to Protect Children from Violent Sexual Predators!

3-7-26

Author - Assemblyman Juan Alanis (R)

SUMMARY

If AB 767 is passed, sexually violent predators who are released from prison will be further restricted as to where they can live. Currently, sexually violent predators are not allowed to live within a quarter of a mile of a school if they have committed crimes against children. If AB 767 is passed, these sexual predators will also be forbidden to live near child daycare centers. AB 767 clarifies that all private schools include any school for children between the ages of six and eighteen years old that is officially registered with the state and publicly listed.

TALKING POINTS

- Child molestation and child trafficking are extremely serious problems in California and in this country.
- Child sexual abusers tend to spend their time near schools, daycares, and other places in which children are regularly seen so that they can find new victims.
- Children from the preschool age through the high school age have been victims of sexual abuse. Therefore, protecting all children of all ages is vitally important.
- The Preamble of the Constitution says we are to promote the general welfare and insure domestic tranquility. Protecting children of all ages from sexual predators is a majorly important way to achieve the goals that are outlined in the Preamble of the Constitution.
